ACHIEVEMENTS AND CLIENT RESULTS

Case study: WRLA – Support services at the World Cup

Next Dimension Accounting (NDA) has worked closely with not-for-profit organisation Wheelchair Rugby League Australia (WRLA) for six years and is a valued partner.

Wheelchair Rugby League is an inclusive sport that is a variation of the running game. People with and without disability play the sport from social to elite level. NDA has helped to build WRLA's success and resilience as an international sport.

NDA provides accounting support such as organisational budgeting, reporting, grant budgeting and acquittals, international sports funding applications and developing scenarios and projections to assist the WRLA board with strategic decision-making and planning.

WRLA Director Joseph Chidiac says, "Next Dimension Accounting is an indispensable part of our team. Their team's expert guidance and invaluable insights have powered our organisation's continuous growth and success in the fiercely competitive world of sports funding, grants and donations."

Like many organisations, WRLA is mainly run by volunteers. Nevertheless, the organisation has secured some significant grants and receives affiliate funding through the NRL. It also receives funding when the Australian Wheelaroos team participates in major tournaments like the Rugby League World Cup. This funding needs to be managed well to ensure that the funder's objectives are achieved and that funding ultimately catalyses the growth and development of WRLA. Reporting requirements in the form of grant acquittals need to be managed well to ensure WRLA meets all compliance requirements and can apply for future grants with confidence and a good track record.

"A really valuable contribution was Next Dimension's support of our World Cup campaign," says Joseph. "For WRLA to send Australia's national team to the UK in 2022, we had to fundraise in advance and apply for major grants."

With the welcome fiscal backing in place, more financial management was required to keep managing the budget for the Wheelaroo's tour of the UK. "As the figures changed, we had to stay focused and spend responsibly," adds Joseph.

NDA stepped up its accounts support. Brendan says, "From helping develop the budgets, we were soon managing funds received through sponsorships, coordinating team allowances and recording funding expenditure for acquittals. In the lead up to the team's international tour, we had regular meetings with WRLA Directors to ensure the organisation's requirements were met."

Thanks to NDA's support, WRLA's national team secured a remarkable top-three position at the prestigious Wheelchair Rugby League World Cup. "Next Dimension's outsourced accounting team played a pivotal role, providing the essential staffing and financial advice that transformed our World Cup dream into a triumphant reality," says Joseph.

Case study: Activus Transport – Outsourced accounting enables expansion

Activus Transport is a leading community transport provider that was first established in the Sutherland Shire in 1979. Since that time, the organisation has grown and developed to service more than 3,000 clients with a fleet of 22 vehicles, 30 staff and more than 80 volunteers.

When a long-term employee retired, the organisation was on the lookout for an accounting firm that could replace the role of an internal bookkeeper with an outsourced accounting service. A presentation from Brendan Lucas from Next Dimension Accounting (NDA) detailed the expertise and ideas that could assist Activus Transport, and highlighted the value of harnessing technology and engaging outsourced accounting services.

The NDA team has since played an integral role in ensuring that Activus Transport meets all financial compliance requirements, manages the organisation efficiently, and accesses real-time information that the management team needs to support the organisation's growth and resilience.

One of the first actions taken by NDA was to replace the organisation's outdated accounting software with Xero software. The adoption of Xero transformed the way that volunteer reimbursement, payroll and reporting occurred.

Volunteer reimbursements had been handled manually, resulting in a significant input of time and coordination. NDA automated this process, so the volunteer reimbursements occurred every fortnight by electronic funds transfer. This development improved outcomes for both volunteers and Activus Transport by providing consistency and freeing up staff to focus on other tasks.

When NDA came on board, he transformed the organisation's ability to analyse and measure. CEO Greg Stanger said, "The systems that Next Dimension Accounting set up have allowed me to access the data I need to make informed decisions, and that analysis has been behind every major decision we have made.

"Whether that is changes to fee pricing and to the types and mix of vehicles, or changes from volunteers to paid drivers, this analysis brought a higher understanding of our costs and what we could and couldn't do. It has allowed us to understand the unit per costing within our organisation."

The Activus team was very impressed by NDA's willingness to truly understand the sector and what the organisation was going through at a higher level. Greg comments, "That means the Next Dimension team did not just look at our operations; they also took the time to understand our contract terms that contained complex funding arrangements. They really go that bit further, understanding outside factors that are impacting us."

Led by recommendations from Activus Transport, word has spread about the benefits of engaging the NDA team who now supply outsourced accounting services to six community transport organisations across New South Wales and Queensland.
